

Call for Writing

Sitegeist was founded with the intention of promoting varied, lively and creative approaches in writing to the questions facing psychoanalysis today.

On 9 and 10 October 2021 the SITE for Contemporary Psychoanalysis and Goldsmith's University hosted the much-needed conference on 'White Privilege, Racism and Psychoanalysis'.

As one of the next steps in continuing the work and conversations engendered by the conference, Sitegeist is delighted to request papers from contributors on topics related to white privilege, racism, and psychoanalysis; psychoanalytically thinking about aspects of race in relation to current events as well as racial aspects of psychoanalysis itself – how race impacts upon the clinic, our theory-making, access to the treatment, and the structures of our institutions and training. The aim is to create a special issue representative of the complexity of this discussion as well as the diversity of those who contribute to and participate in it.

If you wish to be part of this special issue, please share your submission, or any questions or thoughts, to sitegeist@the-site.org.uk.

Reviews Policy

Part of the remit of Sitegeist is to encourage new thinking in psychoanalysis and philosophy, and we see reviewing new books in these fields as a crucial way to do this. Details of books for review should be sent to sitegeist@the-site.org.uk.